Bronx Loaf 2018 Writing Program

Application Deadline: 04/15/18

Bronx Loaf 2018 is a free, weeklong, creative writing program that serves students grades 8-12 from all backgrounds who love writing with a passion. Since 2012 they have helped nearly 300 students from New York City deepen their love of putting pen to paper. And now, they are happy to announce that they are open and ready for business! This year the conference will be held Monday, July 9th to Saturday, July 14th. As in the past their goal is to create a space where students will workshop their creative writing with professional authors and collaborate and socialize with students from public, private, and charter schools. They will also get their work published in Bronx Loaf's anthology, Breaking Bread.

New York City Asian American Student Conference 2018: Emergence

Date: 04/28/18 @ NYU Kimmel Center for University Life (60 Washington Sq South)

Come to the 12th year of the New York City Asian American Student Conference, a student-run, intercollegiate conference for Asian/Pacific Americans on global, local, and national scales. This year's conference will explore the theme of "Emergence." - How have people emerged with an Asian-American identity because of, or in spite of, their lived experiences? Most importantly, how does one embrace the hyphen as a home? NYCAASC 2018 invites attendees to explore the social, cultural, and political conditions under which the different aspects of their Asian-American identities emerge. Together, they seek to build a future where everyone is able to proudly embrace their identities. It will be a free full day of workshops, performances, and more! Lunch and dinner will be served and it's not just pizza.
